

Dear FCC, Please investigate the following:

October 13, 2003, Louisville, Kentucky: After G105 received endless complaints for "Bob and Madison" encouraging listeners to commit crimes of Vehicular Assault upon cyclists, G105 management deemed it appropriate to give "Bob and Madison" a four day weekend. A formal statement was made calling the program cancellation an "indefinite suspension" of the DJs, yet G105 refused to answer questions whether it was paid or unpaid. The purpose of the October 2 and 3rd cancellation was to give a sincere public apology. All the public received was an admittance to no wrong doing, aside from making a few humorous comments that may have offended the cycling community. Sources say the parent company Clear Channel Communications is enjoying the heightened publicity. Despite what executives may believe, any publicity is not necessarily positive.

I hope the FCC won't see the humor in using public airwaves to put people's safety at risk during Clear Channel's license renewal hearing scheduled for December.
